

Teacher and Educator Workshop:

The Great Backyard Bird Count

The Great Backyard Bird Count is an annual four-day bird-watching event to gather a real-time snapshot of bird distribution and abundance across North America! The GBBC is a joint project of Audubon, the Cornell Lab of Ornithology and Bird Studies Canada, working together for bird conservation...and you can help!

Your students can become Citizen Scientists by contributing bird observations from around your school and community between February 14-17, 2014!

Participate in the GBBC Teacher Workshop to learn how to facilitate a GBBC in your Classroom!

1. Take students on a bird hike around your school

2. Identify and record your bird observations

3. Enter your bird data into the GBBC website!

WHO? Elementary and Secondary teachers, nature and outdoor educators, Environmental Club leaders

WHAT? A workshop designed to provide educators with the necessary information and skills to facilitate a GBBC with their students

WHERE? Howard Park Tennis Club, High Park, Toronto

WHEN? Saturday, February 1, 2014 9:00 am – 12:00 pm

WHY? To engage students in nature promoting ecological literacy skills; connect to science, geography and environmental curriculum. and contribute to real bird-focused Citizen Science!

DETAILS

- No Cost
- Space is limited
- Pre-registration required
- Learn about the Great Backyard Bird Count at: www.birdcount.ca!

Contact to Register:

Bird Studies Canada

Email: education@birdscanada.org

Phone: 519-586-3531 x128

The Great Backyard Bird Count is a joint project of:

Canadian Partner:

